sor Production

"The Messiah," Handels immortal oratorio, will be given the latter part of April under the direction of Professor Lampert. In celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the rendition of "The Messiah," in New York, the New York Choral Society recently presented the oratorio. "The Messiah" is considered one of the greatest works from a religious and use our own orchestra and chorus, supplemented by singers from Lexington and surrounding towns. Phi Mu Alpha, musical fraternity of the university, is sponsor for the presentation, and is organizing the forces outside of Lexington, and the success of the presentation will be largely due to its efforts. The presentation will not only be a civic expression of the university and of Lexington, but will be an expression of Kentucky in such an endeavor.

For an adequate presentation of this work, a chorus of three hundred voices will be needed. The Music de-partment desires that every student who is interested in proving his or her ability as a singer will come out for practice. The showing of ability in this production will be in a measure a stepping stone for entrance in-

Says Many Heroic Deeds Were Done By Rescuers of Which the World Will Never Know

Nature, who had for two weeks held Floyd Collins in Sand Cave, relin-quished her close vigilance for a short while, Monday, only to claim him again, after the physicians had examined the victim.

According to Dr. Funkhouser, who has just returned from the cave after a stay of ten days, every pos-sible effort was made and lives were risked in futile attempts to rescue Collins. He said that there were many heroic deeds performed by the workers which will never be known. The early efforts of friends of Collins before the state took the matter in charge, deserve great praise. Dr. Funkhouser also said that the report that the imprisonment was a "putup" affair was absolutely unfounded, and was a discredit to those who had worked so faithfully.

He said that the ones to whom much credit should be given are Lieutenant Governor H. H. Denhardt, who was in charge of the military control;
H. T. Carmichael, supervisor of the work; Roy Anderson, N. F. Ford, Ben
Wells, and John Gerald, who risked Wells, and John Gerald, who risked their lives to survey the underground passage in order to locate the shaft.

Hr. He said "In 1908 there were perhaps not more than fifty public white high schools in the state, but today there are approximately 500."

Mr. Godman emphasized the great need of health education and moral instruction, pointing out the need of trained teachers for the work. "We'! trained, sympathetic and socially-minded teachers will in time create a public opinion that is in favor of increased expenditures for school plants and for the enrichment of the

Cats Rate Well as Contenders for Southern Title

Saturday night the Wildcats sing their 1925 swan song to the basketball fans of Lexington. On that night the final game of the regular season will be played at the University of Kentucky gymnasium with the ancient foe, Centre, as opponents to the Blue and White.

M. C. PORTER top of their form, as was demonstrated in their latter games on the home of the policy floor, and expect to make a winning finish to a season that has been marked by many ups and downs. On Wednesday following the Centre tilt, the Kentucky five leaves for Atlanta Seeks the Nomination to take part in the hectic struggle for the southern championship held every year in the Georgia metropolis.

With one win over the Colonels, registered earlier in the season at Danville, and with victories over teams that have decisively defeated the Centre quintet, the Wildcats an-ticipate little trouble in handing out defeat to the Danville aggregation. But the Centre teams are known for their fighting proclivities and will give the 'cats a run for their money. It would be particularly gratifying to the Colonels to win from Kentucky this season, as it has been two years since she has achieved a victory over the Wildcats on the basketball floor.

Friends of the locals feel that they have a stronge chance to win the southern title this year. When the Tulane quintet went down to defeat before the fierce onslaught of Captain McFarland and his teammates, one of the best teams in the south had succumbed to defeat. The other strong teams in the tourney will probably be limited to the fives from the Universities of North Carolina, Ala-bama and Georgia. Alabama and Georgia both have wins to their credit over the 'cats. If Applegran's men flash the game they are capable of playing, the cheering sections might as well begin to limber up their vocal chords to welcome home conquering heroes.

Western and Eastern Tours Being Considered

The publicity staff of the Stroller organization met Tuesday afternoon and outlined a tentative program for the spring tour.

The first production will be given in Lexington, with a matinee and an evening performance. The enstern Kentucky trip will include Lynch, Middlesboro, and Harlan, and the western itinerary is being formulated, with three western towns in consideration. consideration.

An extensive publicity campaign is being planned, and the Kentucky alumni ln towns to be played are cooperating with the Stroller staff in the sale of tickets and in advertising.

The Stroller eligibles have been arranged into casts, and these groups have been practicing all week, pre-paratory to the final tryouts which will be held early next week. These casts will give the first act of the play, "Fifty-Fifty," before Director Bayless, who will choose the charac-ters for the spring production.

THE LOUISVILLE BANQUET

The sum a University of Kentneky ban just held during the meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association, has become a well established custom and can be node one of the most potential gatherings of the nlumni of the university. The first of these banquets were attended by graduates and former studen's who were in educational work, later the alumni living in Louisville joined in with them, and last year alumni and friends from all over the state and in many vocations were present, about three hundred and fifty in number. Short addresses mere made by Governor William J. Fields, Superintendent McHenry Rhoads and President Frank L. McVey, all of whom dealt with possible development of Kentucky's educational system. Other numbers or the program consisted of a practical demonstration of work being done at the university in the way of music and nrt, which was presented in a very clever manner and was enjoyed very much by nll present.

The banquet this year will be held at the Brown Hotel on Thursday evening, April 23, at 6 o'clock, and promises to be one well worth traveling from the remotest corners of the state to attend. Governor Fields, an alumnum mus of the university, has expressed his inlention to be present, as have many other prominent nlumni who now reside in the state. The heads of the teachers colleges and normal schools, other colleges, including all junior colleges, and many county and city superintendents have been invited and will be guests at this banquet.

Those in charge of the banquet are planning one that will be short and of especial interest to all. After it has been completed, there will be time left to mingle with old friends and to make new ones. Just a real "Get-together Meeting," representing to the University of Kentucky what Jackson Day Dunner and Lincoln Day Dinner do to the two great political

Attendance at this banquet is unrestricted and it is expected that alumni and former students will bring other members of their families and any friends whom they can induce to join them.

UNAUTHORIZED SOLICITATION

All forms of solicitations for funds among the alumni of the university should first have the approval of the Association it its annual meeting or the executive committee. There should be no over-lapping in such matters, as is evidenced by a letter recently mailed out under the direction of the Patterson Memorial Committee without the knowledge or approval of either the Association or the executive committee. The members of the Association are in sympathy with the movement to erect a statue to the memory of Dr. James K. Patterson, but the members of the executive committee believe lames K. Patterson, but the members of the executive committee believe that no further campaign should be prosecuted for this purpose until the Greater Kentucky Campnign is completed. All will remember that the Patterson Memorial Statue fund is to receive five percent from the net receipts of this campaign. At present there is over-due about $70,000 to this fund, and it is believed by those in close touch with the collections on pledges to the Greater Kentucky Fund that all other solicitations should be suspended until this work is completed. Alumni, before making pledges to any fund, should first asceptain whether it has the naproval of the proper authorities. should first ascertain whether it has the approval of the proper authorities.

SIDNEY L. DODDS HELPS STUDENTS

Former Student Has a Unique and Beneficial Hobby

The story of Sydney L. Dodds', ex-'89, assistance in helping deserving students to get a higher education is told in a signed article by Louis La Cross, in the St. Louis Globe-Demo-

McTeague, president of the Maryland Hotel Company of St. Louis, and during the course of his intimate narrative he mentioned the movement that has been started to provide funds for worthy students who desire to pursue their studies through Washington of the Loan Fund Committee that is engaged in raising sums sufficient to meet the needs of ambitious but poor oung men and women, and remarked that he was firmly convinced that bread cast upon such waters would return a hundred-fold.

Send 75 Through College

Pressed for his story, the man revealed that he was Sidney L. Dodds, of Clarksdale, Miss., cotton planter and broker, who as a poor boy was denied the advantage of an education, but who nevertheless has risen to a position of wealth and prominence and whose hobby of late years has been the helping of ambitious boys and girls to receive a college educa-He has already been instrumental in sending seventy-five such youths through college and he says he will not be satisfied until that number has reached 1,000.

This is Dodd's story, modestly re-lated by him to McTeague, who upon his return to St. Louis, made known its details in the hope that it might provide inspiration for persons here who might help in the movement inaugurated by the Washington University Students' Loan and Scholarship

Dodds was born in Hickman, Ky. fifty-eight years ago and was named in honor of two Confederate Generals, Albert Sidney Johnston and Robert E. Lee, His parents were poor farmers and as the roads were impassable during the greater part of the school year, he was 17 years old before he had little more than a primary education. A year later he entered the A. and M. College at Lexington, Ky., by working on the experimental farm in the afternoons and on Saturdays, receiving 10 cents an hour for his term at this school. He recalls now that several of his classmates who were likewise working their way through college were Owsley E. Stanley, present United States Senator from Kentucky; Greene E. Dowis of Blackwell, Okla., now president of the University, but who, on account of fi-nances are unable to do so. He told State Banking Association of Oklahonm, and Captain C. C. Sigma Beta Upsilon Formal Beatuiful in every detail was the formal dance to which the members and pledges of the Sigma Beta Upsilon sorority were hosts Saturday evening, in the ball room of the Phoenix hotel. Decorations suggestive of Valentine's Day were used.

From the large crystal chandeliens were hung many hearts of various sizes. The programs were small booklets of red leather, tied with gray cords and with the Greek letters of the sorority embossed in silver on

The shield of the sorority hung at the far end of the room and was illuminated during the "no-breaks."

Fruit punch was served and the Gobber-Triplett orchestra furnished the music. Members of the active chapter are: Misses Nancy Stephenson, Catherine McGurk, Margaret Yungblut, Edith Minihan, Judith Yungblut, Catherine Richardson, Betty Wick-ham, Dorothy Kirk, Bernice Calvert, Ellen V. Butler, Janet Lally, Dale Casner, Beth Huddleston and Beulah

The pledges are: Misses Lillian Eversole, Esther Gormley, Mary Catherine Doyle, Georgia Alexander, Mary Loretta Murphy, Aleen Davis and Pauline Adams.

The end of the semester marks the initiation of some "goats" and the pledging of others. The various fraternities totaled 29 pledges and the sororities totaled 16. The following announce their pledges:

Kappa Delta: Misses Lillian Howes, Hermalee Wheeler, and Lorraine Clay, of Paintsville, Miss Martha Stone, of Birmingham, Ala., and Miss Lydia Roberts, of Lexington.

Short-lived thought; "You narrow minded bum, if you cannot talk in the English language, hie thee hence from my rendezvous," came from the vocal organs of the exasperated classicist. And we wandered slowly back to our office, meditating on the nar-

We suggest that the students institute a "pay day" on this campus. There is hardly a student here who does not owe some other student some money. These little debts are often forgotten, unintentionally, of course, and we feel that we should designate a day each semester on which all the students would pay their debts and begin again with a clean slate. WEIGHING THE COLLEGES

One of the important considerations before educators today is: "Is the large university or the small college best fitted for the production of the future citizen?"

First, let us ask what the student can rightfully expect to gain from his course in a college or university. The answer to this query is, "intellectual discipline, moral character, friendship, and college atmosphere."

The question in point now is: Where can he best attain these four objects enumerated? The larger universities afford more classes, more eminent teachers, better and more complete laboratory equipment, a larger field of Spalding, Davis, or even Walter for research, and more personal contacts. All these excellent characteristics of the larger university are translatable into the advantages of such institution over the small college.

All thinking is done by comparison, and the greater the variety of stimuli offered to the student, the better will his power to think be developed. The professor lectures to his students without direct contact with them as in classroom discussions, but the lecturer puts his best in his address and if his ideas fall on fertile soil, the result is more effective than if time were consumed in useless discussions with students who did not have their ideas well formulated. Outside conversations among students with their study and lectures as a background, contribute more to the power to think than an unequal discourse in the class.

Moral character can better be fostered and maintained in the large university because the large number, of itself, necessitates stricter discipline and more considerate adjustments toward people, which factors build the

There is opportunity for a more varied choice of friends in the large university. The individual is most likely to find the group with which he desires to align himself and with which he is congenial.

The atmosphere of the large university and of the small college are not necessarily different because of numbers. A university, like Harvard, which has traditions of many years' standing impels the staunchest loyalty. It is the spirit of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and the school which makes for loyalty and that spirit in undiminity of the school which makes for loyalty and the school which makes the school which makes the school which which which which which we school ished by numbers.

WASHINGTON

It is difficult to get the true perspective of an event so far in the past that the environment and actuating circumstances are quite different from our own. It is yet harder when that event is suffused with rays of glory which obliterate all traces of doubt and trial. We are prone to picture Washington as a triumphant leader at the head of a victorious army, receiving a vanquished sword from the defeated Red Coats. We are accustomed to offer his physical bravery, his endurance of privations and his optimism in the face of overwhelming odds as proofs of his greatness.

These things are but relative; Washington himself would have dismissed them with a smile, as part of the days work. Indian warfare: physical danger and hardships meant little to him. But he faced the supreme test of moral and mental stamina. Only a man of his calibre would have had the courage of his convictions in such a crisis. What did George Washington sacrifice when he cast his lot with the Continental forces and became their leader? Not only did he break his oath of allegiance to the King, but he betrayed the very banner under which he had fought; he had turned his sword against his own comrades-at-arms. He had daring to become a potential deserter, a liar and a traitor.

He faced the mental anguish of doubt of his ability to lead the poorly equipped army to victory. He knew the price the country would have to face in event of a defeat; the actual slavery of the men under arms, the tyranny of the military governors, determined that there should be no more uprisings, the crushing of people who had dared to rebel against the majesty of the crown.

He faced the obligation of condemning to possible starvation, not only his soldiers, but the civil body—old men, women and children. He faced ignominious failure, inspired and planned by the jealousy and hatred of not made in an S. I. C. meet, it was not accepted as afficial. In the 1924 to the hardhis downfall. He faced the desertion of a fickle public, weary of the hardships of war and eager for peace at any price.

Finally, he faced the tremendous responsibility of the government of a nation. It was no advantage that this nation was pitifully impoverished in its immediate assets, dangerously rich in its natural resources; that, all also ran 98 yards for a touchdown. though it was almost too weak to stand alone, it was powerful enough to be resented by the Indians and to be coveted by the French. The helpless nation demanded his further protection and offered him a crown. The solution seemed obvious; his hesitation appeared affected. But Washington had no precedent. He had as a guide only his unerring loyalty to his country and his sincere love of liberty.

Sunday this Nation pauses before the shrine of Washington. It does not pay homage to the military leader; it does not acclaim the first president. It bows reverently before one of the world's greatest souls, who, because he believed it was right, "dared to put It to the test to gain or lose

AS HE HAD LIVED

The efforts of a corps of engineers, the ready services of physicians and nurses, the knowledge and skill of geologists and miners, availed nothing in the grim, relentless war at Sand Cave.

When eager rescuers reached the natural prison where Floyd Collins had lain for more than a fortnight, they found only the mortal remains. The indominable spirit of the adventure had gone to explore the last Great Mystery. Perhaps the intrepid explorer would not have had it otherwise. Lured from boyhood by the call of the deep, dark caverns, he spent most of his leisure hours traversing the lonely passages below the haunts of man. Three times he had eluded the clutching fingers of caverns that had sought his life as a price for learning their secrets. Still, he could not resist the fascination that led him to his final tryst with Death.

Sand Cave is a fitting mausoleum to one who gave his life that future generations might see in safety the wonders of these subterranean caverns.

ALPHA XI'S FIGHT HARD BUT LOSE

Town Team Scores Second Victory in Series

The Alpha Xi Delta basketball team put up a game fight in the girls' gym Monday night, but the superior shooting ability of the Town Team enabled the latter to win their second game of the inter-fraternity-hall basketball tournament by a score of 13 to 10, putting them in a position to go into the finals.

The game was interesting and both teams were determined to walk off with the laurels. Alexander of the Town Team started the scoring with a clever crip shot, but the Alpha Xi's retaliated with a foul goal and followed with a field goal. From that point on the score of beth team was point on the score of both teams was practically the same, one team leading by a point or two and then the other taking the lead, until the final quarter, when the Town Team gained a lead of three points, by two difficult shots by Hill.

Hill and Boughton for the Town Team seemed to be able to drop the ball through the loops at any time and in Alexander, Osborne and Robinson they had able support.

Ellison and Ballantine were the best bets of the Alpha Xi's, taking the ball from their opponents on numerous occasions, while Hughes prevented many easy shots at the basket.

LEAN and tanned from work in the open, pipe in mouth, cap pulled well down—that's the erecting engineer, as pictured in the magazines, and generally as found on the job. In an organization like Westinghouse he occupies a pivotal place, being responsible for the erection of equipment in the field.

Take him in the electrification of the Chilean State Railway, for example—one of the outstanding electrical projects of recent years. It included not merely the electrification of 134 miles of steam lines, but also power and sub-station equipment to convert water power from the Andes Mountains into electric current.

In 1922 the first shipment of substation equipment departed—but ahead of it had already departed a force of Westinghouse erection engineers. They went to a country that was a stranger to railroad electrical operation, and to the installation of large electrical equipment. In the 134 miles of steam railway to be electrified they encountered every kind of topographical and engineering condition—curves, grades as steep as 21/4 per cent and as long as 12 miles, bridges extending to 440 feet, six tunnels, the longest 1,600 feet.

Today, two years later, these same erection engineers are returning returning from a Chile, much of whose railway traffic is moved by its water falls; they are returning and promptly departing again on still other missions of electrical improvement, at home and abroad.

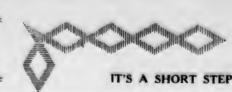

This advertisement is sixth in a vocational series, outlining the fields for engineering achievement in the Westinghouse organization. A copy of the entire series will be sent to anyone requesting it.

The sterling Kentucky forward, Captain McFarland, was unable to get his shooting eye to working and the game had advanced far into the second frame before he was able to register. The basket seemed to have no entrance in the upper part and he missed many tries for the loop. When he did start—he scored six field goals in the last twelve minutes of play, making him high point man of the evening's entertainment.

Forwood, Georgetown center, shot the first goal of the game on a neat crip from close range. Underwood tled the score with a looping shot from the foul line and Milward added two points with a crip, to give the Wildcats the lead. The lanky center then sank a free throw but the Ti-gers took the lead again on two foul throws and Forwood's field goal. Un-derwood came back with a field goal, and after this point Georgetown did not regain the lead.

On February 6, the yearlings made out in a heated battle with the cagers of Union College. The next night they ran into a tartar at Cumberland College at Williamsburg, but managed to gain a four point margin of victory. On this trip the sensational work of Phipps at backguard helped the yearlings to keep their slate clean.

Victory Gives Kentucky High Southern Rating

The Wildcats won one of the most important games on their schedule here last Thursday night when they defeated Tulane University of New Orleans 29 to 22 in a heated contest.
The victory gave Kentucky an average of .714 in the Southern Conference race, as Coach Applegran's men have won five and lost two official games. Tulane came to Lexington with a reputation which threw fear into the hearts of the Wildcat sup-porters, as she had been beaten only once previously, and that by the Mississppi A. and M. team, which later fell before Tulane by 20 points. Tulane had also defeated Alabama in two games, who in turn defeated Kentucky on their Southern trip. Thursday night's game was one of the hardest fought and swiftest played on the local floor this season. result was in doubt until McFarland sewed up things late in the final half.

Throughout the contest, "Speedy" Alberts played a remarkable game, and he has shown in the last three contests that he is one of the best sta-tionary guards in the south. The shooting of Milward, enlongated cencouncil quintet, one of the strongest mateur teams in the Falls Cities.

An "easy team" almost defeated Coach Applegran's Wildcats at the men's gymnasium Wednesday night, men's gymnasium Wednesday night, at the gentle game of basketball. The Tennessee Volunteers, who had previously been defeated by Centre 26 to 23, came to Kentucky primed, and almost carried off the game. The final score was 26 to 21. The Tennessee team led the Wildcats 12 to 1 after 17 minutes and ten grant of after 17 minutes and ten seconds of play, and it took "Speedy" Alberts to sink Kentucky's first field goal after this period.

To say the least, the game was poor and the Felines displayed the poorest brand of play in the first half they have shown this season. The Vols, in a mad rush, piled up points, while the 'cats ran wildly over the floor, stupified and seemingly lost.

However, in the second half, the Blue and White players awoke from their trance, overcame a 14 to 9 lead and piled up enough points to eek out a five-point margin of victory. It would be hard to pick out a star from the Kentucky team. Milward

This was confirmed by the recruiting officers there, who said that a young man had enlisted on February 7 under the name of "Henry C.
